Judge: There's no right to drill a well CITY COULD GIVE CONCOURS A RUN FOR ITS MONEY

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY County judge has ruled against two Pacific Grove property owners who sued the city to drill a well on their undeveloped lot.

In an 18-page decision, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Robert O'Farrell rejected Darren Davis and Robert Fuller's claim the city illegally denied their request to sink a well on the vacant property at 305 1/2 Bishop St. They also sought monetary damages from the City of Pacific Grove.

"This ruling is important because it validates the city's decision to protect residents from new development that relies upon unproven water supplies," said David Laredo, Pacific Grove city attorney.

Davis and Fuller want to use the property, which backs up to the Presidio, to build a single-family home. Because of a 1995 state order that pumping from the Carmel River must be drastically reduced, there has been no water available from California American Water Co. for new homes in the Monterey Peninsula for years. And there isn't likely to be anytime soon. The well was the only option the two men had to use their property.

But in his decision, O'Farrell cited a 10-year-old city report outlining the "health and safety" of wells in Pacific Grove, and he upheld the city's determination that allowing a well to be drilled on Davis and Fuller's property would pose a health risk.

"It is within the city's police authority to prohibit the use of water produced by a private well that is determined to be a danger to the health, safety or welfare of its citizens," according to the report.

Davis and Fuller purchased the quarter-acre parcel on Bishop from Cal Am in hopes of building a home.

The two sued the city after council members turned down their request for a well permit on May 4, 2005.

Constitutional issue not 'ripe'

In the lawsuit, Davis and Fuller sought damages contending the city essentially took their groundwater rights by denying them the well permit. And they said the city violated their Constitutional rights by, in effect, denying them all use of their land.

But O'Farrell also said the men couldn't raise the constitutional claim because they had not applied for a permit to build a house. Nor had they made an application to the city to be placed on the water waiting list. Therefore, their claim against the city was not "ripe" for consideration.

And even if the matter had been ripe for review, O'Farrell ruled, "It is clear that the petitioners have not been deprived of all economic use of the property, because they will be able to build when they receive their water allocation some time in the foreseeable future."

Davis declined to discuss specifics of the case until O'Farrell makes his decision final. On April 24, O'Farrell released an "intended decision," which he is unlikely to change.

The diminutive antique cars of the Western Gaslight 1 & 2 Cylinder Registry make even ordinary cars look huge in the parking lot at Whalers Cove in Point Lobos. The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea plans to host a car show in August 2007 — but with muscle cars and other 1960s icons, not century-old putt-putts.

What a difference a century makes

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PROVING ANTIQUE cars look right at home on the Monterey Peninsula no matter what month it is, members of the Western Gaslight 1 & 2 Cylinder Registry on their annual tour brought their diminutive horseless carriages to town last week.

"There were 119 people and 49 antique cars from 1903 to 1913 headquartered at the Carmel Mission Inn," said Piedmont resident John Morrison, club president and tour chairman. From their centrally located hang-out, the club spent four days cruising Point Lobos, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach, Cannery Row and even out Carmel Valley Road to Hastings Natural History Reservation, stopping for photos, food and fun along the way.

Their visit to America's Last Hometown was particularly memorable, with a private, docent-led tour of the Point Pinos lighthouse and special treatment downtown.

"They put cones out for 49 spots on Lighthouse Avenue that were reserved for us, and we put on a car show at noon," Morrison said. "And tons of people came and looked at them, asked questions about them and ENVISIONING A Carmel-by-the-Sea Concours d'Elegance of muscle cars and not-quite-so-old European automobiles on Ocean Avenue during next August's historic car week, the city council voted 4-0 Tuesday in favor of an idea first pitched by auto enthusiasts Doug and Genie Freedman five years ago. The show would feature 130 collectible cars from 1961 through 1970 — "the stuff of dreams from my high school parking lot," Doug Freedman told the council.

"To capture the spirit that is Carmel, it would be a sophisticated event, a high-end event, but with a dash of fun," said the Atlanta, Ga., resident, who has judged for the Pebble Beach Concours and Concorso Italiano and served as national board chairman for the Ferrari Club of America. He also hosted private events for Ferrari buffs at Il Fornaio the last two years.

"This has been a longtime dream," he told the council May 2. "My wife and I have great passion and think we can bring something great to the City of Carmel."

Though details were hazy, when pressed by Mayor Sue McCloud and other council members to provide more information, Freedman said he envisions different classes of cars backed into diagonal parking spaces along Ocean Avenue's medians from Junipero and Monte Verde streets.

Ocean and side streets between Sixth and Seventh avenues would be closed to traffic, and spectators would be invited to inspect the entries and watch the judging, just as they do in Pebble Beach. Music would play, and announcers would share facts and anecdotes about the cars and their owners.

Unlike Pebble Beach, the Carmel show would be free, but it would still benefit local charities.

And the undertaking would not cost the city a dime, as Freedman and sponsors would pay for everything.

Building inspector recalls years as Mayor Dirty Harry's bodyguard

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN ONE of the big screen's most recognized actors was elected mayor of Carmel 20 years ago, the small town's police force had to figure out how to protect its new boss and handle the crowds that flocked to city hall. Workers installed bulletproof plating in the dais in council chambers, and building official Tim Meroney became a bodyguard.

"I was the most obvious choice," he said. "I pretty much could be used at any time during the day as a reserve police officer, so I became the security for the mayor when he was in city hall."

Clint Eastwood took the oath of office April 15, 1986, and immediately began chairing meetings of the council. He frequently worked in city hall to take care of even routine mayoral tasks. But the town's

Council removes one house from historic list, puts back 43

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL City Council this week overruled one historic resources board decision and asked the board to reconsider another.

David and Audrey Hall's old Carmelo Street house is not historically significant and should be removed from the city's inventory of historic properties, the council decided May 2.

But the board must also reverse its January decision to remove from the city's official historic list 43 buildings constructed after 1940. Taking them off the list violated Carmel's Local Coastal Program, the council decided.

Few examples of an architect's work

The Halls' home — built in 1926 by Robert Stanton years before he became an architect and designed the well-known Normandy Inn — was not designed by him, is not a good example of Tudor-revival style and has undergone too many changes to retain any historic integrity, consultant Anthony Kirk told the city council. Over the years, the house was enlarged by more than 50 percent and received a lot of new siding, windows and roofing.

"Whatever significance the property might have had — and in my estimation, it had none — it has very clearly lost its historic integrity," Kirk said. "It's my professional opinion it should be removed from the inventory."

On Feb. 27, the HRB voted 3-1 to deny the Halls' appeal, which they filed last year after learning the city planned to record the historic designation on their property deed. Based on a survey by historian Kent Seavey and a subsequent review by consultant Leslie Dill, the board decided Stanton designed the home and mandated its preservation because few examples of his work exist. The board also decided the home was a good example of modest Tudor-style architecture and retained its character despite the alterations.

Associate planner Sean Conroy, however, sided with the Halls and recommended the council overturn the HRB's decision and remove the home from the inventory.

"The board attributed this directly to Robert Stanton," Mayor Sue McCloud said. "Certainly he was the contractor, but he was not an architect at the time."

Councilman Mike Cunningham said the extent of the alterations clearly compromised the home's integrity, and councilman Erik Bethel wondered why they were even bothering to discuss the matter at any length.

"Let's move on," he said, and the council voted 4-0 (councilman Gerard Rose was absent) to remove the home from the historic list.

Off again, on again

Most people wouldn't consider buildings constructed after 1940 historic. And because Carmel has no specific standards for determining which, if any, of the city's younger buildings would warrant official protection, the HRB decided in January to remove 43 properties an historic consultant had deemed important even though they are relatively new.

But removing them "as a class" isn't permitted by the city's LCP, according to the staff of the California Coastal Commission, which intervened to halt the removal of the newer homes from the city's historic inventory.

City attorney Don Freeman agreed, telling the council the HRB "did not have the legal authority to take the building off the list."

Carla Ramsey, representing the local government relations committee of the Monterey County Association of Realtors, asked if anyone had challenged the coastal commission's interpretation of the HRB's move.

"This whole historic resources issue is very complicated for property owners and our real estate industry," she continued. "We need clarification, and we're not getting it. As time goes on, our liability increases. As agents, we need to be able to know what to tell our clients so we aren't sued for negligence of disclosure."

Cunningham sympathized but said the council could not tackle so many issues in one night.

"We have to work on the bigger problem," he said. "But [right now] we're talking about asking the historic resources board to do what is considered the legally proper thing."

The council voted 4-0 to send it back.

Hiring, keeping deputies biggest challenge for incoming sheriff

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH DOZENS of unfilled law-enforcement and administrative jobs — and the recent departure of at least two deputies for the brand new Citrus Heights Police Department — Monterey County Sheriff Mike Kanalakakis constantly faces the challenge of finding qualified officers and keeping them on the payroll. His challengers in the June 6 election, bailiff Vincent Earland and Sgt. Robert Oen, believe they can do a better job.

"It's important we keep our people, because they're our single most important resource," Kanalakakis said. "We train them, invest in them, and then if they're lured away by a better paying job, it leaves a hole in our agency."

And fewer people doing more work leads to poor morale, according to Kanalakakis, who has eliminated 44 additional positions to save $6.4 million since he took office in January 2003.

The department needs to offer better pay and benefits to would-be deputies, said Kanalakakis, who has frequently asked the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to give his agency a larger share of the county budget.

According to his undersheriff, Nancy Cuffney, recruits earn $3,996 per month, plus benefits. After graduating from the academy, their pay increases to $4,440 per month and can reach $5,776 per month.

"We have to pay the top in the county in order to retain the best people in the county," Kanalakakis said.

In addition, many are deterred by the prospect of spending their first few years working in the jail, as required.

Earland accused Kanalakakis and his staff of doing little to recruit and retain deputies.

"We offer a job and salary — basically that's all," he said. "The job is very dangerous, and deputies learn they have to go work at the jail with more than 1,300 dangerous inmates."

Earland, who came to work for the sheriff's office a decade ago after careers in the military and business, said deputies asked him to oppose Kanalakakis. He called the jail "a deplorable place to work," and said most new hires prefer patrol.

"There are people who like to work corrections — don't get me wrong," he said. He

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Nasty note leads to woman's arrest

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SATURDAY, APRIL 22

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine en route to a water leak at a Lasuen residence. Engine on scene. Crew investigated the occupant's report of water leaking up from the ground in his yard near the garage. The water meter was shut off and the occupant advised to contact a plumber for repairs to the water service.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported medical emergency on Perry Newberry. Engine and ambulance on scene. As there was no one home at the reported residence, the police department was contacted for address confirmation. The dispatcher reported she had received a 911 call from a young child reporting a medical need and the emergency 911 ALI screen had indicated the dispatched address. Residences in the area were contacted, but no medical need was found.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to Villa Carmel, Fourth between Mission and San Carlos streets. Engine and ambulance on scene. Crews were met on scene by a resident of the apartments who had stated that the fire alarm bell had sounded a couple of times during the day, and that a contractor had been on scene conducting sprinkler system repairs. Contact to alarm company through FireComm indicated that the central station had not received the alarm but would dispatch a technician to service the system. As the building had checked clear, the alarm was silenced.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine responded to a request for automatic aid to a possible structure fire at Hacienda Carmel. Additional responding units were requested to hold their positions when it was determined that the fire was confined to an oven. Fire engine and other units were released from the incident and returned to quarters.

Trapped in a fallen building? One of these noses may sniff you out

DOGS TRAINED to find living victims trapped in the wreckage of disasters cost $10,000 to train but are priceless to those they save. With Carmel Valley, Seaside and Salinas fire departments set to receive six coveted canines, the Pebble Beach Riding & Trails Association will hold a fundraiser Thursday, May 11, to help pay for them. Admission to "A Table Affair" is free, but donations will be sought.

"So far, we've all survived without anything happening in this immediate area," said Averil Nero, association president. "We can't rock back and assume things will be taken care of — we need to put our money where our mouth is and do something about it."

The event, which will run 2 to 6 p.m. in the conference center at the Lodge at Pebble Beach, will feature 26 tables set by "ladies using their own china and imaginations," Nero said. Tasty food and libation will complement the creative settings.

But the main stars will be the specially trained "first response" canines and their firefighter handlers, who will meet and greet visitors throughout the afternoon. Pluis Davern, their professional trainer, will also attend.

The dogs, which venture into danger zones as soon as possible after disaster strikes, trained in abandoned buildings on the former Fort Ord this week, picking up living human scents and doggedly pursuing them to locate the "victims."

"If you've never seen a dog climb a ladder, you're going to be impressed," said

Nero, who called the training "absolutely phenomenal."

enjoyed it."

They were understandably curious. While tours of younger — and definitely larger — historic cars are common, particularly during the Peninsula's Concours week each August, few focus on America's earliest automobiles.

"They were just sitting in people's garages and were maybe occasionally used in a local wedding, or something," Morrison said of the one- and two-cylinder Oldsmobiles, Cadillacs, Buicks and more obscure brands that "were just trying to be as good as a horse, as far as how fast and how far they would go," when they were designed a century ago.

The small cars quickly became obsolete, as stronger, more powerful, four- and six-cylinder vehicles entered the market, and today, some are very rare, if not truly unique.

Morrison — a retired school administrator and lifelong car buff who bought his first tiny horseless carriage at the age of 30 — said he, a friend and their wives decided to organize events for like-minded aficionados. Their inaugural trip in 1994 was based in Carmel, and the group, which is affiliated with the Horseless Carriage Club of America, has since taken annual tours all over the state. Next year will feature the Shenandoah Valley in Gold Country.

Beyond the logistics of getting a large number of people and their collector cars to the same place at the same time, the group has to take local traffic into account.

"These little cars only cruise 20 mph, so when we get a whole line of them, it can be frustrating for modern cars," Morrison said. "I think people enjoy seeing us out there, but the more traffic, the harder it is. And as soon as you get on steeper hills, these poor little cars really struggle — they only go 2-3 mph."

That's even slower than a horse.

WEEKEND RACES PROMISE NEVER A DULL MOMENT AT LAGUNA SECA

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN MORE than 90 Grand-Am Cup cars line up on the starting grid to head into their two-and-a-half-hour race around Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca Saturday during the May 5-7 U.S. Sports Car Invitational, some of the crew members tending to them might look a little small. Forty children from the Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey and Salinas will work as "Grid Kids" for the afternoon race, while 260 of their young friends — all brought to the track courtesy of the Historic Stock Car Race Series — look on.

The invitational features an eclectic mix of races, from the zippy Mazda MX-5 Cup and historic stock cars, to the 91-car Grand-Am Cup and the main event, the Grand American Rolex Sports Car Series of high-tech Daytona prototypes and souped-up touring cars.

The racing will begin Friday at 8 a.m. with practice sessions, and qualifying rounds that afternoon. Saturday will include practice and qualifying, followed by the Grand-Am Cup. Sunday's racing will feature the SCCA Mazda MX-5 Cup, the Rolex Sports Car Road & Track 250 (as in, miles, or two hours and 45 minutes, whichever comes first) and the Historic Stock Car race.

And if the on-track entertainment isn't enough, organizers are hosting a fan party at Bullwacker's on Cannery Row from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday night, and MarqueMadness, an ongoing party celebrating different car makes and models, will run all weekend. Participants will park their cars in special corrals, watch from reserved bleachers, judge each other's wheels in a "Funcours," mix with enthusiasts and celebrities at a BBQ mixer and take laps of the track, among other activities.

For more information on the races, schedule, special events and ticket prices, visit Laguna Seca's newly updated website at www.laguna-seca.com. As always, kids are admitted free with a paying adult.

Jack O'Connell last month. He will honor the award winners at a ceremony in Southern California May 26.

Principal Kim Williams, who will retire in June after 38 years in education — the last eight at Tularcitos — said the state recognized, "the great dedication and hard work the staff does here every day in teaching the whole child. We recognize academics are important, but without the basis of a good character, they're meaningless."

With its students scoring well on statewide standardized tests, Tularcitos became eligible for California Distinguished School designation, but Williams and his staff were unsure they wanted to undergo the intensive application process.

"You already know you're pretty good, and you don't need someone from the outside saying, 'Oh yeah, you're good,'" Williams said. "But then I was talking to someone whose school won it several years ago, and they said it's really important to the kids."

That clinched it, and Tularcitos, along with almost one-fifth of the state's 5,000 public elementary schools, did the research and submitted the 24-page application.

A team of two working principals and one retired principal came to survey the campus March 23. They observed the school's "welcome buddies" — students who help new kids adjust — and the "conflict managers" who assist children in resolving issues on the playground.

In their review, the principals agreed the school is fulfilling its vision statement: "Tularcitos is a fulfilling school where each student is known, loved and cared for academically, socially and morally. It is a place where adults and students are held to high standards, ensuring that all students reach their highest levels of achievement and the ability to apply those skills to real world situations."

Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Marvin Biasotti said the award reminded him how much educators accomplish on the job.

"When you've been in the district as long as many of us have been, it can be easy to lose sight of some of the extraordinary things that happen here every day," he said. "The staff and parents work as a team to nurture and care for every child as they prepare them for their future. It may sound like a cliché, but at Tularcitos, it truly happens."

YOUR AUTO COLUMN

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe POWER UP!

If you like to drive with your A/C on, the stereo cranked up, and the DVD player on, it should be clear that today's nominal 14-volt DC electrical systems and 12-volt batteries are barely keeping up with the increased demand. With the plethora of new electronic devices on the market, it is not hard to see a day soon when vehicles' electrical systems will strain to keep up. In addition, car manufacturers are increasingly using electric motors rather than belts to drive components such as the water pump. With this in mind, a consortium sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers has advocated introduction of a 42-volt system with a 36-volt battery, which we may see within a few years.

As it becomes more common for more electronic devices to be used in your car, serious attention must be paid to your electrical system. Our services are guaranteed for 12 months or 12,000 miles with NAPA Peace of Mind Warranty, and some repairs offer extended warranties. We are the oldest independent repair facility in Monterey going... and growing!

P.S.: Fortunately, battery technology is developing in tandem with hybrid technology.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Connors, R.N.

HOME CARE EQUIPMENT ACCOMMODATES ALL SIZES

Hospitals and medical equipment companies are responding to an increase in patient size with an increase in equipment size. Bariatric equipment (medical equipment for patients weighing more than 250 pounds) has become big business. For example, bariatric beds have thicker mattresses, stronger steel reinforcements, and more powerful height-adjustment gears to accommodate obese patients. While this equipment costs more than traditional pieces, it has become necessary. More than 60 million people in this country are considered obese. When they need medical care, specialized equipment is often needed. Bariatric equipment includes mobility aids (wheelchairs, canes, crutches, ramps); personal care equipment (back braces, pressure relief cushions); and bath safety pieces (transfer benches, commode chairs). Wheelchairs can even be custom-built to accommodate obese patients.

Bariatric equipment is good news for many people confined at home. When home care is needed, HELP-AT-HOME invites you to call us. We offer a full range of home care services, from running errands and meal preparation to housekeeping. Call (831) 655-1966 or (831) 655-5014 for more information about our referral service.

P.S. Bariatric furniture, including recliners and beds, are becoming more available to serve larger individuals.

Meg Parker Connors is an RN and owner of Victorian Health Care Services, Victorian Residential Care Homes and Help-at-Home, a domestic referral service here in Monterey. For assistance, call 655-1935.

Foundation honors volunteers

NINE LONGTIME volunteers received accolades and applause from the Carmel Foundation during a special luncheon held at Rancho Cañada Golf Club last week.

Those recognized include longtime pianist Hal Harris (volunteer since 1985); librarian Marian Kovacevich (1986); Nancy Larsen, with the needle-craft group since 1983; librarian Jayne McClurg (1983); Kay Power, tour program volunteer since 1979; Blanche Soderman, also involved in the needle-craft group, since 1981; tour program host Marjorie Trapkis (1982) receptionist Isaline Sedan (1985), and Audrey McCormack, lead volunteer in the library from 1985 to 2006.

Founded April 21, 1950, the Carmel Foundation provides low-cost meals, classes, field trips and other services to members, who must be 55 or older. It receives no tax dollars, operating entirely on donations.

During the past year, the group served more than 27,000 hot lunches on site, delivered more than 5,800 meals to homebound seniors, and provided over 2,000 rides to medical appointments, grocery shopping and errands. As the largest supplier of senior housing in Carmel, it provided low-income apartments for 54 residents in three apartment buildings.

Carmel Valley

Four decades after its heyday, "flower power" is alive and well in the valley

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN THE late 1960s, "flower power" conjured up colorful images of long hair, radical politics and loud music. Forty years later, those mental snapshots are little more than fading memories. But the catchy phrase — once plastered on the bumpers of Volkswagen buses and sewed on denim jackets — is alive and well in the 21st century and provides the theme for Sunday's 37th annual Flower and Art Show at the Hidden Valley Institute in Carmel Valley.

The event might seem tame next to Woodstock, but thanks to the abundance of nature and the hard work of local gardening aficionados, the show promises to be as colorful as the Summer of Love.

"It's one of the best amateur flower shows in California," explained Kathy Klawans Smith, event co-chair and Carmel Valley resident. "It has a distinctive flavor that really shows the diversity of Carmel Valley. Our focus is to get people interested in plants, in their community and in the arts."

Chef Wendy Brodie, host of the television show, "The Art of Food," will present a cooking demonstration with edible flowers and herbs. Television host Dave Egbert plans to offer gardening tips, artist Jennifer Klein will provide lessons in "The Art of Hand-Thrown Pottery" and Pat Regan from the Rana Creek habitat restoration project will talk about how to grow native plants in containers.

Horticulturist Al Graham, a former instructor at Monterey Peninsula College and Carmel High School, will be on hand to answer perplexing gardening and plant identification questions.

flower show," Smith said. "He's an incredible teacher, and he imparts such enthusiasm for plants."

The event will include a plant sale offering vegetables and ornamental plants.

"Everyone comes early and lines up because there are so many great deals," Smith said.

A farmers market will offer fresh produce.

"The carrots this year are really incredible," Smith said. "They're like eating sugar."

Also featured will be an art sale, a silent auction, face-painting (just like in the 1960s!), a petting zoo for kids (complete with bunnies and baby chicks) and a BBQ. All proceeds from the flower and art show benefit local charities.

"All of the money we make is returned to the community," Smith explained. "In the past, we've donated money to the Carmel Valley Library, the Carmel Valley Community Park, the Hidden Valley Institute, and the Boys & Girls Clubs."

The show begins at 10 a.m. Admission is free. The Hidden Valley Institute is located in Carmel Valley Village at Carmel Valley and Ford roads.

MAYOR

headquarters could not handle the spectators so suddenly interested in city business.

"We tried having council meetings at city hall, but there were too many people," Meroney said. "We would have them lined up out into the street just to get a look at the mayor."

So they moved to the much larger Carmel Woman's Club at San Carlos and Ninth that accommodated about 100 people, but still the audience spilled out the doors.

"There was no bullet proofing there, but we searched everybody's bag before each meeting," Meroney said. "Anything out of the ordinary was not allowed in at all."

Concerned the famous mayor would be a target, the police department asked military experts stationed at Moffett Field to teach officers how to recognize explosives.

"Before every meeting, we would take a walkthrough of the building and make sure there was nothing unusual," Meroney said.

Faux Dirty Harry

Eastwood's new role drew not just movie fans and starry-eyed females — some of whom told Meroney they moved to Carmel just to be near the actor — but also the usual assortment of kooks and characters, who could be downright frightening.

"Quite often we'd get threats. One day, the FBI called and said there was a wanted person who was armed and headed to Carmel. He swore he would kill Dirty Harry," Meroney said. "He got all the way from the East Coast to Phoenix before he was picked up."

Then there was the look-alike. "We had a guy come in dressed as Dirty Harry, in the brown suit with the skinny tie, and he was carrying a toy gun," he said. An employee reported a "scary guy in city hall," so Meroney called Carmel P.D. for backup and escorted the man outside. There, officers determined the gun was in fact a toy and advised their odd visitor to never return.

One woman took advantage of the public comment period at council meetings to profess her love for Eastwood, propose marriage and offer to have his children.

"And he'd say, 'Thank you very much. Have a nice day,'" Meroney said. Eventually, the police had to escort her out, and after that, she would come to the meetings but sit in the back and keep quiet.

"Working with him, I became pretty protective," Meroney said. "On your watch, you're not going to have anyone hurt, but as we became more friendly, I wasn't going to let my buddy get harassed."

Thanks for the stairs

Meroney also found himself offering advice to the new mayor.

"The first few months, he was kind of heavy handed. He wanted to change things, and he and I had several discussions on the operations of municipal government," Meroney said. "He was always receptive and wanted to know how to make things better, easier, beat the system and still get things done."

Also, the council before Clint was quite restrictive about rules for development, Meroney observed, whereas Eastwood loosened things up. He said he feels the past five years have struck the proper balance.

Although legend has it Eastwood legalized ice cream

PINE CONE FILE

After his swearing-in April 15, 1986, Mayor Clint Eastwood's news conference was attended by media from around the world. Coping with the logistical problems was a fun challenge for city staff, but dealing with the nut cases was not.

cones downtown, the famous battle was, in fact, over the lack of water at one storefront, Meroney recalled. Eastwood told the people who wanted to open their ice cream shop to find a store with adequate water, of which there were several.

"And then he said, 'Now that's the last thing I want to hear about ice cream in Carmel,'" Meroney recalled.

And Carmel Beach visitors have Eastwood to thank for several sets of wooden stairs leading from Scenic Road to the sand.

"There had been this big political quagmire over getting the stairs replaced after the storms in '82," Meroney said. "He took office in April and said he wanted stairs installed down to the beach by the Fourth of July."

Meroney pledged to get it done, "and your 'temporary' stairs are still there," he said. The adoption of the Local Coastal Program in 2004 officially made them permanent.

Eastwood's two-year term was a busy one, as the actor made several movies while in office and represented Carmel during the much-publicized visit from the Pope and an unannounced one by the King of Spain.

"I had a lot of fun. He was a lot of fun, and he and I became very good friends," Meroney said. "For several years after he left office, I would ask, 'When are you going to come back and save me, come back to be mayor?' And his answer was, 'Why would you want to put me through that again?'"

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF URSULA SWIGART
Case Number MP 18057
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of URSULA SWIGART.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by WILLIAM SWIGART in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY. The Petition for Probate requests that WILLIAM SWIGART be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: May 12, 2006
Time: 10:30 a.m.
Dept.: Probate
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Agujito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

manager Christie Miller to bring the idea before the city council, pushed for approval of the concept so more detailed planning could get under way. He said the Carmel Chamber of Commerce's board and its economic development committee, as well as the Carmel Residents Association, like the idea.

"We have an individual who has the wherewithal to pull this off," he said. "This could be a premier event that is beneficial to the City of Carmel."

No more slow day

"Our concern is we're lending you our name," McCloud said when she asked Freedman for a more detailed description of the show proposed for noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 14, 2007. "So we need a lot more information before there's a definitive affirmative."

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, who owns a shop on Dolores Street with her sister, suspected business owners might be reluctant to give up parking and deliveries twice in one week, as the Pebble Beach Concours Tour shuts down Ocean Avenue and some side streets on that Thursday.

Councilman Mike Cunningham wanted to know how money would be raised for charities. And while the Freedmans hoped the council would approve their car show concept for a three- to five-year period, Cunningham favored reviewing it after the first year to make sure everyone wants it to continue.

Freedman described his vision but said he would not know the particulars until planning begins, which can only happen with council approval of the concept.

Downtown business people and hoteliers spoke in favor. Ryan Williams, marketing manager for the Carmel Plaza, said events help promote the city to prospective visitors, and Tom Glidden, general manager of La Playa, said a Tuesday event would help boost occupancy during the slower part of Concours week.

"It's a great opportunity for Carmel to be one of the stronger venues," he said.

Bobby Richards, who tends bar and manages the restaurant at the Cypress Inn, said he was a "voice for the worker bees out there" when he urged council approval. Carmel's hospitality workers usually take Monday and Tuesday off that week, because they know business will be slow.

Richards' boss, hotel co-owner and car buff Dennis LeVett, agreed Carmel should have its own show and said the Freedmans are the proper people to present it. Others also touted the couple's thoroughness and capabilities.

"Get in the game," urged Maria Murray, past chairman of the chamber board and a downtown business owner. "This is an opportunity for you to hit a home run. I think we would be foolish to walk away from the partnership."

According to chamber CEO Monta Potter, 68 percent of businesses responding to an informal online survey liked the idea, and she commented on the rarity of someone approaching the city with the willingness and ability to put on an event.

Dilution, confusion feared

Only Sandra Kasky Button, chairman of the P.B. Concours d'Elegance for 21 years, spoke against holding another during a week when enthusiasts are already overwhelmed with the races, auctions, shows, sales, parties and rallies.

"The Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance is finest show in the world," she said. "This might perhaps dilute the very lovely thing we all have."

In a letter to Miller, Concours Tour organizers also worried the Tuesday show would confuse fans.

"Just how many more car events can this community afford to have?" Leslie MacMillan and Stuart Pressman asked.

But city administrator Rich Guillen encouraged the council to OK the show, since it would boost name recognition for Carmel-by-the-Sea while being financed by someone else. He recommended trusting Miller to do a thorough job helping the Freedmans plan and implement it and said any red-flag issues would be brought to the council's attention.

"What would be a shame is to take an event like this and lose it to another venue," he said.

Guillen proposed a resolution allowing the planning to move ahead but calling for review of the event after its first year. He also asked the council to delete a provision calling for street closures from 4 a.m. to midnight, due to concerns that was too long. Finally, the council will receive regular updates as planning commences, and Miller will discuss it at monthly meetings of the Carmel Community Activities and Cultural Commission.

With Bethel impatient for approval and McCloud reluctant to give it without further detail, the council voted 4-0 for the concept. Councilman Gerard Rose was absent.

At 25, choral group prepares for birthday bash and summer tour

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR MUSICIANS, success can be measured in many ways. Some seek commercial prosperity, while others strive for critical acclaim or creative freedom.

If longevity is a benchmark of success, I Cantori di Carmel certainly has reason to celebrate. The Carmel choral group turns 25 this year, and to commemorate the occasion, the Carmel Mission Basilica is hosting a silver anniversary concert Saturday, May 6, at 8:30 p.m. The following day, the group will offer a 3 p.m. matinee show at the Pacific Grove Performing Arts Center.

With a concert at the Vatican highlighting an upcoming European tour, I Cantori has come a long way since its relatively humble beginnings a quarter century ago.

"I was approached by a small group of about 16 singers to become conductor of a new group," recalled Sal Ferrantelli, who has served as the conductor of I Cantori since its inception. "They were Bach Festival singers, but they wanted to sing year round. I had just moved here and, since I was the new guy, they approached me. I said yes, and within a year we had about 60 members."

From the start, Ferrantelli decided he wanted the group's concerts to stay fresh.

"I made a vow for as long as I was conductor, I would always change the repertoire," he recounted. "For 25 years, we've performed new material each new concert series, the only exception being our 10th, 15th and 20th anniversary concerts."

This weekend, the group will perform four choruses from 18th century Sicilian composer Emanuel D'Astorga's "Stabat Mater." The choruses represent the only major spiritual choral works D'Astorga ever penned.

Other selections include Johannes Brahms' "Neue Liebeslieder Waltzer" and single movement works from Stefano Bernardi, William Schumann, Thomas Tallis and William Byrd.

Ferrantelli is looking forward to I Cantori's rendition of "Neue Liebeslieder Waltzer" or "New Love Songs Waltzes."

"They are delightfully charming waltzes about the trials and tribulations of love," he explained. "You can't heal the wounds that love inflicts, but comfort comes from love itself."

As a special treat, two lively African spirituals and a new work by local composer Nathanael Pangrazio will complete the program. Ferrantelli is particularly excited

Local artist celebrates decades of painting with one more exhibit

By CHRIS COUNTS

ARTISTS ARE far from being an endangered species on the Monterey Peninsula. Drawn to the Central Coast like migratory birds seeking a safe haven, many newly arrived artists patiently ply their craft and wait for a niche to open up in one of the many local galleries.

Once upon a time, Peggy Olsen of Monterey was an aspiring artist. Now, 30 years later, she's ready to give it up.

"I really enjoy painting, but it has a way of taking over your life," Olsen bemoaned. "It doesn't leave time for other things."

For the past 15 years, Olsen's colorful oils have graced the walls of the Carmel Art Association, where she has been one of the venue's top-selling artists. And now she's ready to walk away from it all, but not before one last exhibit of new work, which debuts with a reception Saturday, May 6, at 6 p.m.

Best known by local art lovers for her bold renderings of California hillsides saturated with color, Olsen's latest show is appropriately titled "California Roaming."

Perhaps even more impressive than her longevity and the prolific body of work she has produced is the fact she is painting at all. A late bloomer, Olsen hardly picked up a brush before she turned 40.

"I took a batik class at Monterey Peninsula College in 1970," recalled Olsen, now 69. "I had taken classes before, but the

She/he was the best in the wild west

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

JILL JACKSON in a one-man/woman show gives an irresistible performance as "One-Eyed Charley" at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts in Carmel.

Described as the "wildest Western tale" by its author, Kathy Deskin-Jacobs, it tells the true (with just a dash of exaggeration) story of a unique contributor to the growth and development of California in the middle of the 19th century — an era when stagecoaches were a vital means of transportation and their drivers had to be men of iron.

One-Eyed Charley Parkhurst achieved a unique fame as one of the most reliable, steady and unusually robber-proof stagecoach drivers in the West — one who presented himself as a man but was actually a woman, born Charlotte Parkhurst in 1812.

As a stagecoach driver, she had early-on very effectively discouraged such banditry by killing the first two miscreants who tried it on her. Along with her highly developed and well-honed driving skills, these incidents gave her an almost legendary reputation.

In telling the story of Parkhurst's life, director Deskin-Jacobs had an excellent protagonist in Jill Jackson, who related her stories (many of them hilariously funny) in a laid back, relaxed, John Wayne, matter-of-fact manner and with an appropriately manly swagger.

Her Western twang added color to her tales. The highly appropriate ballads, created by Michael and Kathy Jacobs, that she sang to her own guitar accompaniment were right to the point and very well done, even if it is doubtful Charley really sang and played so appealingly.

Engaging sympathy and creating a comfortable feeling between performer and audience, Jackson outlined the feisty, capable and thoughtful person who once really existed.

The script tells of the unusual survival skills this woman developed when she recognized she had to become totally self-reliant and strong if she were to have some sort of independent existence in the days when women had few ways of taking care of themselves.

An episode showing how the stable manager tested Charley on handling the coach and team of horses, was a memorable vignette in the play. It seemed as if it was much more difficult to accomplish than learning to drive a car.

She had many adventures, some of which were heartrending and some humorous, as in her description of Ulysses S. Grant long

Earthbound Farm walks show that bugs are people, too

"Teaching a child not to step on a caterpillar is as valuable to the child as it is to the caterpillar."
— Bradley Millar

ALTHOUGH THEY are small, insects hardly play an unimportant role in our ecosystem. And even though some people find them annoying — even frightening — most insects aren't pests at all.

To help spread the word about the benefits of bugs, Earthbound Farm in Carmel Valley kicks off the summer season with its first Bug Walk Saturday at 11 a.m. The one-hour wilderness adventure provides a bug's-eye view into nearby fields for kids, families and curious adults.

The most common kinds of insects are beetles, butterflies and moths, ants, bees and wasps, flies, grasshoppers and crickets. There is hardly a place on earth where you can not find insects — forests, jungles, grasslands, deserts, swamps, ponds and streams. Sometimes they can even be found inside the bodies of other animals. According to Scientific American, entomologists estimate there are more than million species of insects on Earth.

Insects are the primary pollinators of fruit trees and flower blossoms, and we would not be able to enjoy many fruits, nuts, vegetables and flowers if it were not for our little six-legged friends. They serve as tasty sustenance for a variety of animals and are an essential link in the food chain for birds, fish, small mammals (mice, shrews, bats and others), reptiles and amphibians, and spiders.

Insects also set an excellent example as recyclers, and they keep Earth clean by finding nutritional value in organic waste such as leaves, stumps and logs, animal carcasses and manure. So, you can imagine, life would be a lot different if it weren't for the good work of insects.

Insects can be distinguished from other small animals by their six legs, three body parts (head, thorax and abdomen), antennae, compound eye and wings (usually, but not always). Also, some possess super hero-like abilities. Grasshoppers can jump 40 times the length of their body; ants can carry objects that weigh 100 times as much as they do.

Because of their abundance, and because kids are naturally curious about bugs, an event such as the Bug Walk fuels kids' enthusiasm about insects and science. Plus, it can help children turn fear into fascination.

According to Todd Kodet — Earthbound Farm's vice president of supply, entomologist and frequent Bug Walk tour guide — what kids love best is the "talking, asking questions, looking at the insects and releasing ladybird beetles [ladybugs] into the fields."

The parents enjoy "visiting the farm, seeing how the crops grow, learning about organic production methods and being outdoors," he adds. Get a child excited about bugs, and it's easy to create at-home, insect-inspired projects such as photography, gardening, arts and crafts, reading, and learning about the environment and lifecycles.

Led by Chris Glynn, Earthbound Farm's senior associate and supply manager, this hands-on hunt for creeping critters will give children a glimpse into the Alice-in-Wonderland world of the smallest critters that share our environment. While peering in the grass this time of the year, kids can expect to find lots of spiders (not an insect), cucumber beetles, ladybird beetles, aphids, lygus bugs, bees, parasitic wasps, caterpillars, spittle bugs, flies and butterflies, says Kodet.

This extra-fun farm tour always draws a crowd.

"The attendance is probably 20 to 40 usually, with an occasional high of 60," says Kodet. Bug Walks also include a goodie bag for participants to take home.

This year, Bug Walks take place May 6, June 3, July 1, Aug. 5 and Oct. 7. To register for the Bug Walk, call the Farm Stand at (831) 625-6219. Walk-ins are welcome. $3 per child; adults are free. For a complete calendar of Farm Stand events, including Chef Walks, Harvest Walks, Bug Walks and more, visit www.ebfarm.com. The Farm Stand is located at 7250 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley (3.5 miles east of Highway 1).

about performing the piece by Pangrazio, a Monterey resident who is only 20 years old. "He is a phenomenal young composer," beamed Ferrantelli. "He composes music of great feeling. It's very expressive."

The Monterey String Quartet will accompany the chorus at both silver anniversary concerts.

The choral group is also making plans for a series of concerts in Europe from June 16 to July 3. Stops on the tour include Croatia, Sicily and the Vatican.

Performing at the Vatican is a first for I Cantori. But the question begs — just how does one go about booking a gig at the Pope's crib?

"We talked to our tour management company," Ferrantelli recalled. "We stated a preference for the venues we wanted to play. They put us in touch with the proper authorities. They asked for a recording of our singing and what our repertoire would be.

Then they made the decision to allow us to play there, which is a real honor."

Tickets for the May 6 performance in Carmel are $18 for general admission and $25 for reserved seating. Tickets for the May 7 concert in Pacific Grove are $18 for general admission or two tickets for $30. Tickets are available at Pilgrims Way Books and SandCastles by the Sea in Carmel, the Bookmark in Pacific Grove and Bay Books in Monterey. For more information, call (831) 624-8012 or visit www.icantori.org.

became president. She was also aware that when she eventually went to vote for him, she was the only woman to vote in 1868. There is a bronze plaque in Soquel memorializing this fact.

The production was cleverly staged with the very appropriate set and scenic design by Kathy Deskin-Jacobs. The stagecoach driver's box by Eric Maximoff, plus bales of hay and hay scattered on the floor, gave the look of a stable. This added realism to the story since it is also about one person's uniquely gentle and effective handling of horses.

"One-Eyed Charley," with its recollections of the unusual life of a woman masquerading as a man from the long-gone past, told in a connected series of anecdotes by a masterful story teller, is a most tenderly and warmly enjoyable dramatic entertainment.

There were some rough spots when the production opened, but these surely have been smoothed out.

EXHIBIT

batik class really piqued my interest. Gradually, I discovered oils, and I also discovered oils are much easier to work with."

Working with oils, Olsen became fascinated with color.

"I don't use color in a traditional way," she explained. "I try to use it in a way that excites the eyes."

For her last show, Olsen hopes to go out with a bang.

"I feel I tried with this show to reach for bold images and statements," she explained.

Olsen admitted she'll still pick up a brush from time to time, but the days when painting filled up her days are now part of the past.

"I'm a member of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom," she said. "I'd like to spend more time working for social justice causes. I feel very strongly about it. And I'd also like to have more time to read and relax."

The exhibit — which will be displayed in the gallery's Beardsley Room — continues through June 6. The art association is located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth streets and is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-6176 or visit the www.carmelart.org.

St. Bernard hosts talk

PROJECT ST. Bernard, Carmel-by-the-Sea's neighbors-helping-neighbors group, will host a talk by three key public service figures Thursday, May 11, at 4:45 p.m. in the Chapman Room of Sunset Center. Viveca Lohr will discuss Meals on Wheels, Pacific Grove Fire Chief Andrew Miller will speak about Carmel Fire Department (which the city council contracted him to manage), and Michael Benoit will describe Legal Services for Seniors. The public is invited, and hors d'oeuvres and wine will be served following the talk. For more information, call (831) 624-4234.

By Margot Petit Nichols

PEARL RICE, 8 months old, was a birthday present from Mom Cathleen and Dad Joe for their three daughters, Katie, 9; Megan, 8; and Kelly, 6. A Labrador was what they all yearned for, yet Santa Claus uncharacteristically failed to come through year after year. Bypassing the North Pole altogether, Mom and Dad came to the rescue.

Every morning, Pearl wakes up early and brings a tennis ball to Mom while she's still in bed, hinting broadly that they should get off to the beach right away. After breakfast, the girls leave for River School and Mom (at last!) takes Pearl and the tennis ball to Carmel Beach for a romp and a fetch. On week-ends, Katie, Megan and Kelly share the joy of flinging the tennis ball repeatedly into the ocean for Pearl to retrieve.

Pearl was all decked out in her purple collar and matching leash when we met her Wednesday morning on the walking path above Carmel Beach, eager to careen down the dunes and into the ocean. She politely waited for her photo to be taken and to be interviewed before tugging at the leash and leaning energetically toward the staircase to the water's beckoning edge.

Back home, she's into perpetual mischief: At breakfast time, she hangs around the table waiting for an opportunity to steal sausage from her sisters' plates and then dashes off to savor it in solitude. She loves to chew socks when Mom's sorting the laundry, runs around the house with her pink rubber elephant, squeaking it all the while, and gets into a brawl with Kelly, who hides her tennis ball in a pocket knowing Pearl will extract it after a riotous chase.

At night, although Mom and Dad invested in an expensive and commodious Lands End dog bed, Pearl sleeps on the pink couch instead, knowing in her heart of hearts that she is its rightful owner.

Trained to circumvent all sorts of obstacles and wiggle through tight spaces to locate victims, the dogs alert their handlers to a find with a special bark.

During the training, "the dogs would come in and get the feel there was somebody there," she said. "If you don't see it, you can't believe it."

The National Disaster Search Dog Foundation, which oversees the training, often adopts its pupils from shelters and breed-specific rescue groups, according to Nero. Strong bonds develop between handlers and canines, and they "are never homeless again."

"The fire departments are so keen on this," she said. "These different organizations have realized how valuable these canines are."

Nero said the group hopes to raise $10,000. The riding and trails association, the Pebble Beach Company and other groups are underwriting the costs of the event, so every donated dollar goes straight to the cause.

"The money is staying here," she said.

Children's author at Harrison Library benefit

THE STORY of a little girl who wanted to become a mermaid will be the subject of the latest fundraiser for the Carmel Public Library Foundation. Children's author Lynn Hazen — who penned the award-winning "Mermaid Mary Margaret" — will be on hand to meet children and their parents at the Harrison Memorial Library's Park Branch Saturday, May 13, at 3 p.m. Children are invited to attend free of charge. Tickets for adults are $30 and may be purchased by calling the library foundation at (831) 624-2811. The Park Branch is located at 6th and Mission in Carmel. Refreshments will be served.

on May 10. Reservations are required. Call (831) 655-9506. Additional information can be obtained at www.CaringResources.org, or

Roberts on creativity

IT'S ONE thing to teach a student the techniques necessary to sketch a nude, write a poem or act in a theater production. It is quite another to motivate an aspiring artist, writer or actor to be creative. Poet Elliot Ruchowitz-Roberts presents a talk on creativity Thursday, May 11, at the Cherry Center for the Arts. The program is made possible through grants from the Arts Council for Monterey County and the Community Foundation for Monterey County. The event begins at 7:30 p.m. The center is located at Fourth and Guadalupe. For more information, call (831) 624-7491.

Forum on caregiving at the end of life

THE COMPASSION-ATE Care Alliance will present a forum on caregiving issues at the end of life. A hospice doctor, home health care worker and spiritual care worker will comprise the expert panel. The event will take place at Pasadera Country Club at 6:15 p.m.

RESERVE CARE: YOUR CONTINGENCY PLAN

Many of our clients come to us following an unexpected illness or injury requiring hospitalization and affecting the person's ability to be at home without assistance. The hospital typically will not discharge patients until a follow-up care plan is in place, so everybody scrambles around trying to find the right care facility or home care agency on short notice. This creates stress and can result in an uninformed choice among options for home care.

Through our Reserve Care Program, we meet with you in advance to find out what's important to you, explain all the options available and take care of the paperwork. Then, if an emergency arises, you're ready. We'll work with you, your family and your doctor to assure that you are comfortably at home with just the right amount of personal assistance. We can also coordinate with home health or therapy services, arrange for any necessary home repairs, take you to appointments and otherwise make life easier so you can use your energy to get well.

There's no cost to enroll in the Reserve Care Program until you actually use our services. Think of it as your contingency plan...because it means you have provided for the future.

SHERIFF

believes the sheriff's office should recruit guards at the state prisons and cross-train deputies to handle a variety of assignments.

"We hire them, we train them and then they go to Salinas P.D. or one of the other agencies in the county or another county," commented Oen, a 30-year MCSO veteran who works as a sergeant in the jail but has been out on medical leave for neck surgery. "We have to really sit down and think about how we do things. The majority of the people who come to work with us don't want to work the jail."

Oen proposed training and rotating deputies through patrol and jail duties, and then giving those who prefer corrections the option to stay.

"And we need to actively recruit people," he said. "We're not doing that."

Cuffney said recruitment/retention is the agency's No. 1 concern, but it has to compete with all others in law enforcement at job fairs.

"The number of qualified candidates isn't what it used to be, when the military was such a feeder for us," she added.

The department especially wants home-grown recruits who have ties to the area and will likely stay here despite the high costs of living and home prices — reasons frequently cited by deputies when they leave.

All three candidates agreed the old jail needs work and pledged to find tax dollars to help rebuild it.

"The jail is my issue," Oen said. "They talk about remodeling, but we should just bulldoze the whole thing."

Morale

Cuffney said one-third of the department commutes from outside the area, leaving few opportunities for recreational time and developing esprit de corps, and Kanalakakis blamed low morale on finances.

"When you're in a situation such as we are and you're not able to provide the tools necessary to do the job — and in many cases you have to take things away from your workforce — that lowers morale," said Kanalakakis.

Old equipment, forced overtime and doubling up in patrol cars contribute to dissatisfaction on the job.

"It all comes down to money and resources, and I'm trying to work very hard to bring that into perspective," said Kanalakakis, who wants to restore 44 jobs that were cut and put deputies back on school grounds and in remote areas such as Big Sur.

At the recommendation of the 2004 Monterey County Civil Grand Jury, he hired a firm to audit staffing and operations. "The main purpose of that is to assist in making recommendations for the budget," he said, which amounts to about $66 million.

"We're undermanned, understaffed and overworked," said Earland. "When there are cuts, they're always at the bottom, with the little guy, not the big guy."

He also blames poor morale on a disconnect between upper management and the front lines — a sentiment with which Oen agrees.

"He's removed from everything," he said. "He's isolated himself, and I don't think he really knows what's going on on the ground floor of operations."

Who they are

Kanalakakis, a lifelong Monterey resident, attended San Jose State University and served in the Air Force until 1976 — including assignments in Strategic Air Command and Tactical Air Command. He was sworn in as a deputy with the Monterey County Sheriff's Office 29 years ago and rose through the ranks, serving as commander of 10 different divisions as well as interim chief of Greenfield P.D. He also obtained a master's degree from Golden Gate University.

Since being elected sheriff, Kanalakakis said he spearheaded a countywide gang task force, a bomb squad set to become active this summer, an agricultural task force, the K-9 detail, fingerprint and iris identification systems in the jail, online services and balanced budgets, among other accomplishments.

His vision is to "eradicate gangs and gang violence, eliminate illicit drugs from our neighborhoods and schools, prevent school violence, better prepare our communities to deal with disasters and terrorist acts, and ensure better service to enhance the quality of life for everyone."

His endorsements include the Deputy Sheriff's Association — which he won over Earland by a single vote — the National Latino Peace Officers Association, the Monterey County Association of Realtors, SEIU Local 817, Operating Engineers Local No. 3 and the Peace Officers Research Association of California, as well as four of five Monterey County supervisors. (The exception was 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter.)

Earland, originally from Philadelphia, Pa., served 20 years in the Air Force, including a dozen in special operations for the National Security Agency.

"That's where I picked up a lot of my pizzazz, you might say," he said, as well as a lot of training.

After retiring, he started a business purchasing distressed properties, renovating them and selling them for a profit. He and his wife moved to the Peninsula to open and run businesses in Seaside, after which he became a police services assistant for Seaside P.D. Investigators there told him he should attend the police academy, and after graduating, he went to work for the sheriff's office, which offered more money than SPD, in 1996.

If elected, Earland said he would streamline the department and reorganize all bureaus to save money that could be used for drug enforcement task forces, SWAT, emergency response teams and more front-line and administrative jobs. Earland said he would draw up a new retention scheme, seek bond funds to fix the jail, and run the department to "operate more efficiently, economically and safely."

He received the endorsement of Monterey County prosecutors.

Born in Ohio, Oen graduated from college and served in the military before moving to Santa Cruz in 1973.

"When I was about 6 years old, we were in a car accident caused by a drunk driver, and my father was killed," he said, which motivated him as an adult to pursue a career in law enforcement through which he hoped to effect positive change.

Earland became a Monterey County Sheriff's deputy in 1975 and was promoted to his current rank of sergeant five years later. He has spent his entire career working in the jail.

After trying unsuccessfully to get others to challenge Kanalakakis and Earland, he decided to enter the race himself. As sheriff, Oen said he would be a public servant, not a politician, and would ask for high-level pay cuts to fund more deputy positions.

"The money with which we operate the sheriff's department is actually your tax money. Our jobs as stewards of your money involve our ability to manage and spend your money wisely," he said.

He also pledged to "take good care of the deputies, so they will be able to take good care of you."

He has sought no endorsements and will accept no contributions.

The election for sheriff will be held June 6. If no single candidate captures 50 percent plus one vote, a runoff will be held Nov. 7.

Gas is still cheap

ONE OF the ironies of the national outrage over the runup in gasoline prices is that the things that matter most — including gasoline — are actually the cheapest, while people happily pay much higher prices for things they probably don't need at all.

Let's start with water. Thanks to strict environmental rules and a very limited local supply, people who live on the Monterey Peninsula pay more than practically anybody else in the country for tap water. Most Cal Am bills come to about 1 cent per gallon. (According to the National Resources Defense Council, the California average is one-sixth as much.) But even at the local high price, tap water is a tremendous bargain, considering how important it is to personal cleanliness, cooking and clothes washing, not to mention life itself. One cent per gallon for something so vital is an amazingly good deal.

Peninsulans also pay some of the highest prices for gasoline. Nationwide, the average price this week was $2.90 per gallon for regular unleaded, while the cheapest we could find in the Carmel area was $3.29. But amid all the hand-wringing over oil companies' "price gouging" and "windfall profits," it is also important to keep in mind that the amber liquid you put in your Toyota or BMW performs an extremely valuable service. One gallon of gasoline contains 32,000 calories of chemical energy — enough to push a 2,000-pound car 20 miles uphill. And getting that liquid to your corner gas station isn't easy. As we have pointed out before, it requires a vast international effort involving millions of workers, a complex industrial infrastructure, elaborate transportation networks and the investment of huge capital sums. And it also comes at a high price to the environment. Considering all that, even $5 (less than one hour's work at minimum wage) for a gallon of gasoline would still have to be considered a bargain.

To see how true it is that water and gasoline — two things we rely on every day — are extremely cheap, one need look no further than the nearest drugstore or supermarket, where customers line up to pay much higher prices for liquids they could easily do without: bottled water, soda, perfume and wine, to name a few.

The only thing that makes gasoline "expensive" now is that we've gotten it so very cheaply all these years — so cheaply that many people have been brought up on the idea that it's perfectly OK to buy an SUV that gets on 12 or 15 miles per gallon and then use it for frivolous trips or even for joyrides.

Gasoline has gotten a bit more expensive. With an costly desal plant in the Peninsula's water future, bills for H₂O will also probably be rising sharply. It may be a shock to think about that. But there's nothing shocking about the idea that people will learn to value such precious commodities a bit more.

Tear down Flanders

Dear Editor,

I want to applaud Olof Dahlstrand's proposal that Carmel tear down the Flanders Mansion and return the land to the surrounding park. This idea has been floating around town for some time. I first heard it over the counter from Greg at Friar Tuck's next to the post office.

Friends of the Forest should easily trump Friends of Flanders in this community.

Lindsay Hanna, Carmel

Dilworth finds Pine Cone useful

Dear Editor,

While we do seem to agree on one thing

— the idea that "government will always do the right thing ... after they have exhausted every other possibility," your last two Pine Cone editorials were so silly and misleading they could be harmful if left unchallenged.

Last week the Pine Cone cries NIMBY (Not In My Backyard) when it argues that we should clean up stormwater somewhere else (Bangkok etc.) — but not clean up our stormwater pollutants here.

The fact you sleepwalked past is that stormwater cleanup was intended to be finished, done and completed by 1984 by the Clean Water Act of 1972. "Swimable and drinkable by 1984" was the goal.

Our cities and the county have had more than three decades to clean up this pollution, but they never even started. Subsidizing growth seems to be the only item on their agendas.

Then two weeks ago you opined that the seriously imperiled California Red-Legged Frog (Rana aurora draytonii) was not the frog that made Mark Twain (Samuel Longhorn Clemens) famous.

Well, when Twain graced our gold country there were only two frog species living there: the adorable Pacific Tree frog — about the size of a quarter; and the California Red-

Legged Frog — which grows to about the size of a human fist.

Red-Legged Frogs are darn close to the size of Daniel Webster, the leading jumping frog in the Twain story published in Harpers which gave him his first public acclaim.

The simple fact is for years the unsigned Pine Cone editorials have expressed nothing but arrogant disdain for protecting our environment; our life support systems.

You do provide a public service in an unusual way. Many people use the Pine Cone as a reverse advisor. Whatever you write — they suspect the opposite is more likely true.

We still await finding anything helpful in your writings on our environment.

David Dilworth, Pacific Grove

The best way to provide affordable housing

Dear Editor,

I read with interest the story in the April 21 Pine Cone about yet another lawsuit against the City of Pacific Grove.

As I understand it, Larry Scholink purchased water years ago when water transfers were allowed. Now, a different council doesn't like the deal? That's not only unfair to the property owner, but it's unfair to a person of limited means who could have moved into the affordable unit Scholink proposes to build.

I believe the affordable housing crisis can be eased by allowing small rentals with perpetual rent restrictions throughout our area, where they can fit without being a burden on the neighbors. Allowing small apartments — over a garage, for example — could provide low-income housing and cost the county nothing, zip!

Instead, when we talk about low-income housing, it's usually in the context of a "project." In other words, affordable housing is great as long as it's not in my neighborhood — let's shove the housing project into some dark corner of town. But that will never work. Affordable housing should be dispersed throughout the community. And who will oversee a rental more effectively and efficiently than a homeowner anyway? Certainly not some government agency.

The bottom line is, we need leadership with vision, passion and the drive to bring solutions, not endless years of endless discussion, and certainly not more lawsuits that will surely cost the citizens of Pacific Grove, again.

Russell Hays, Carmel Valley

One hand gives and the other takes

Dear Editor,

How much money did Scott Miller get from the City of Pacific Grove when he was forced out as police chief and then sued the city? Apparently enough to allow him to forego his salary now that he is a councilman. His gesture seems more like "leadership position" strategy than generosity when he suggests that his colleagues give up their hard-earned pay.

The sky may not be falling in P.G., but the sewers are still crumbling, and neither the city nor its leaders are going to get by on their looks and empty pocketbooks.

WHAT IS LIKE-KIND?

As you doubtless know, it is possible—and often potentially very profitable—to engineer a tax-deferred 1031 exchange of properties. You can, in effect, trade one piece of real estate for another or for several others, building and refining your portfolio over time. But you must trade your property for "like-kind" properties. What exactly does that mean?

As with so much in the tax code, it's difficult to come up with an exact definition of this term, and the IRS doesn't help much. A close reading of the tax code and of tax court cases suggests the following, though.

In the first place, the like-kind property must also be real estate. A rental home can be exchanged for an office building, a commercial building for several condominiums—they are all real estate. In the second place, though, the real estate you exchange and receive must be "held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment." If you are using one of the properties for less than 15 days a year and renting it out for the remainder of the year, the IRS may or may not be skeptical about an exchange. In such a case, and indeed in all cases, be sure to sit down with your tax advisor and carefully map out your tax-deferring strategy in detail. For assistance call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

WELL PERMIT

In August of last year, Davis pointed out that his parcel is large enough to meet tough state and county setback requirements governing the size of lots eligible for well permits. A well would also have to meet strict standards for quality and quantity before county health officials allowed its use for domestic consumption, he said.

"There is no water available from Cal Am or the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to build a house anywhere on the Monterey Peninsula," he said. "If the public utility can't provide water for a new house on a legal lot, the obvious alternative is to drill a well."

But Pacific Grove has an ordinance that requires a lot with a well to also be connected to the Cal Am water distribution system.

Davis and Fuller argued their plan met that requirement because they would have an emergency Cal Am hookup for fire sprinklers. They city said that wasn't good enough and the judge agreed.

A common situation

Since Davis and Fuller's property is not located above an aquifer, it would have to tap into fractured bedrock for its water, a common situation in mountainous parts of the state, but which does not provide a fail safe supply, the city contends.

And if the well failed, the property would have to start using the Cal Am distribution system, which would unfairly place Davis and Fuller ahead of others on the waiting list for water connections, Laredo said.

"That was the rationale the city used in denying the permit and that is the rationale the judge used," Laredo said.

He denied that the city's refusal to issue the well permit was a tactic to prevent development in Pacific Grove.

"The city wants more water so that people can satisfy their development plans within the approved zoning," he said.

Long before residents in Pacific Grove were connected to Cal Am's water system, the city's water came from wells and springs in the granite layers beneath the city.

In his decision, O'Farrell addressed that fact by providing excerpts from a 1996 report issued by the Joint Planning Commission and Pacific Grove City Council Committee on Water.

"Although water wells provided water before the city developed a water distribution system, the Pacific Grove of 1996 is not the Pacific Grove of earlier years," the report said. "Because the city of Pacific Grove is part of an urban system, there are certain perceived rights that property owners may not be able to exercise fully because of implications these presumed individual rights may have for the health, safety and welfare of the entire community."

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female subject wished to report that she believes that her ID was being used by a female subject whom she has never met. The reporting party believes that her former husband provided this female subject with the RP's information. The RP is attempting to reestablish her life; however, this unknown female subject has ruined her credibility. RP lives in Pleasant Hill and notified the local police department of her situation along with district attorney's investigators of this matter. The RP also reported that her ex-husband has enlisted the help of a citizen to harass her on various occasions.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported losing her ladies' pouch somewhere in the business area on this date.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unattended death of an elderly subject at a Lincoln Street residence. Fire engine and ambulance also responded to the scene and confirmed the male was deceased, pulseless, breathless, rigor mortis.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A loose dog that was reported found in the business area on San Carlos Street was transported to the Carmel Police Department. The owner was contacted and cited and the dog was returned to the owner.

Carmel Valley: Citizen complaint of reckless driving on Carmel Valley Road near the Carmel Middle School. Matter referred to California Highway Patrol.

Pacific Grove: A female San Mateo resident, age 45, was arrested for grand theft and theft from elders after an investigation led police officers to her. She had been hired as a caregiver in 2005 for an elderly Pacific Grove couple, and when unusual charges on their credit card were noticed by a family member, the police were notified. The suspect is believed to be responsible for the unauthorized use of the credit cards, which totaled an amount around $15,000. She was booked at PGPD and held pending release on bail or transport to the Monterey County Sheriff's Office for further arraignment.

THURSDAY, APRIL 27

Carmel-by-the-Sea: The west storefront window of a Dolores Street gallery was painted on to cover a poster that was displayed inside the gallery. [The poster contains photos of the proprietor's foot sores.]

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of nonpayment of services (civil) on Lincoln Street. Informational only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Took report of a fall on city property at Fifth and Lincoln.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to a mutual aid request to a medical emergency on Carmel Valley Road for an older male experiencing leg cramps with blood in the urine. He was transported to CHOMP.
